CITIZENS:

I have the honor to report that the condition of our schools during the past year has, on the whole, been satisfactory. It affords me pleasure to state that the teachers have been faithful in the discharge of their duties, and have labored earnestly for the advancement and welfare of their pupils.

During the last ten years it has been my privilege to visit many schools in each of the New England states, and in several of the other states, and I deem it proper to say that, in my opinion, our schools are fully equal to the ungraded schools which I have visited in any other state. This of course is not placing them on an equality with the well-graded schools of Massachusetts, or of our own state; it is simply doing justice to our own schools, taking into account their character, and the disadvantages under which they labor—disadvantages inseparable from all ungraded schools. In the graded school the teacher has generally not more than two classes; the pupils have all been trained and drilled in the lower grades, and have met all requirements necessary for promotion. The amount of work to be done in any one term is not large, but the pupils are required to do that work thoroughly, and to pass satisfactory examinations in all their studies before being allowed to advance to the next grade. Hence pupils receive a drill in all the elementary branches which it is impossible for them to receive in the ungraded school. And as a thorough knowledge of the elementary branches is the foundation of all education, the advantages of the graded over the ungraded system can easily be seen. Again, pupils in the graded school have constantly before their minds the stimulus of promotion at the end of the year. In the ungraded school there is no promotion—the pupils simply go along, though often poorly equipped, from lack of previous training, to do the work they are attempting to do. It can readily be seen that such a system cannot bring about the best results. But with all their drawbacks, we all believe, and I think justly, that our district schools have always been, and are today an extremely important factor in the prosperity and welfare of our country. They certainly contribute greatly to making of intelligent, patriotic, and self-respecting men and women. They are the only schools to which the children of a large portion of our people have access.

If pupils are willing to work faithfully and earnestly, provided competent teachers are employed, these schools can give them an education which will fit them to grace any position in life. Think of the thousands of boys and girls, many of them children of unambitious parents, perhaps, who have become so imbued with the love of study in these schools that they have resolved to pursue a higher course of study. Our colleges are filled with young men and young women of this class, who have chosen to study and work, and to undergo all sorts of privations, that they may obtain what they rightly consider the most valuable of all acquisitions—a thorough education. To this class belong some of the most eminent and distinguished men that our country has produced. In their case the seed sown in the district school took root, and brought forth abundantly.

It is only to utter a truism to say that the value and importance of our schools cannot be over estimated; for, whether pupils make the best possible use of their time or not, it is certainly true that all are greatly benefited by their influence. And this influence is more potent and far reaching than one is inclined to admit without considerable reflection. Let us, then, give our schools our heartiest support and encouragement. I believe that, to make them as efficient as possible, great care should be used in the selection of teachers, and that, to secure the best teachers obtainable, liberal salaries should be paid.

By law, books, when once introduced, cannot be changed during the period of five years, except by vote of town. This term expires the present year, and it will be necessary to appropriate quite a sum of money for the purchase of new books. The most of our books have been in use during the whole period of five years, and their condition may be appropriately described as "horrible." The truth is, that we should have almost an entirely new supply, the greater part of those we now have, being entirely unfit for further use.

NAMES OF PUPILS NOT ABSENT DURING THE YEAR.

Frank Lincoln, Howard Pinkham, Christine Smithwick, Fred Smithwick, Roy Wilson, Raymond Hall, Leonard Hall.

SUMMARY.

Total number of pupils between the ages of four and twenty-one years on the first day of April 1899, 286.
